THE BRITISH PREMIER AND THIS TWO GREAT ANTAGONISTS, THE GOUT AND GLADSTONE .-Mr. Disraeli has had another attack of gout, from which he has not quite recovered. This week it has selzed his right foot. He was in great pain on Tuesday night, and was obliged to leave the task of replying to Mr. Gladstone, at the close of the debate on the endowed schools bill to Mr. Hardy. He comes down to the House in shoes made. of some softer material than leather, and his features at times wears a dark, troubled look of pain with which it is impossible not to sympathize. I am told he is afraid of colchicum and its effect upon the nerves. Has the First Minister forgotten Sydney Smith and his emotions on seeing the autumn crocus in flower? "Who would guess," said be, "the virtue of that little plant? But I find the power of colchicum so great that if I feel a little gout coming on I go into the garden and hold out my toe to the plant, and it gets well directly. I never do more with-out orders from headquarters. Oh! when I have the gout I feel as if I was walking on eyeballs."

Mr. Gladstone is said to have been reading and writing at high pressure in the country, and he is so much absorbed in his literary undertakings that he carries them on in the House of Commons. One night he is seen writing many pages on quarto paper, half margin, such as the judges write their legal judgments upon. The writing is large, but the lines are close, and the manuscript is evidently intended for publication. Last night

Offices, Twenty-second and Dock and Ninth and the late Prime Minister was engrossed for a Main streets. long time with a volume in which he made from time to time copious annotations and corrections. This work is carried on for hours under the eyes of a full House, and while the speeches are being delivered to which the right honorable gentleman intends to reply. Mr. Gladstone wears rather an auxious look, and is by no means in the florid, robust health naturally expected from a Minister who has been living for two or three months among the Welsh hills. From the amount of literary work he has brought to town with him it would seem that he labors nearly as unremittingly in his retirement as when in office. Such an invalid must be the despair of his physician and his family. Perhaps the gout doctors would say that if Mr. Disraeli refuses to take colchicum he is not much better .- Edinburgh Scotsman-London Correspondence.

A STORY OF TOM MARSHALL .- On one occasion Tom Marsnall heard R. J. Breckinridge preach, and falling in with him after service, accompanied him home. "Why don't you preach better?" said Marshall. "I do as well as I can," answered Breckinridge. "Why don't you preach as the Saviour did?" continued Marshall, "That's hard to do," rejoined Breckinridge. "Preach in paralles," said Marshall; "that is a very simple and easy thing to do; "at's the way our Lord sets forth the truth." "Well, Tom," said Breckinridge, "I have as high an opinion of your talents as anybody else has, and I set a higher estimate on your reading and information than most people do. I defy you to make a parable, and I defy you to find one in literature-outside of the New Testament." "Nonsense!" exclaimed Marshall: "I can make fifty, and I can find a hundred." "Well, try it, and let me know," replied Breckinridge. Shortly afterward they met again. "Well, Bob," said Marshall, they met again. "Well, Bib," said Marshall. SPECIAL NOTICE. what about those things—the parables? I have tried my best, and I can't make one; I've looked everywhere, and I can't find one.
What does it all mean? I give it up."
"You see,,' replied Breckinridge, "why I don't preach in parables. I can't do that."-

My barber informed me that whereas there are thousands of negroes here in the summer, the permanent residents do not amount to a hundred. "Dey is most all waiter, sah. I was in dat perfession myself when I fus come heah." "Do you find it better to be a barber?" I asked. "Well, sah, I am much pummanent. Waiters only gets tree months' livin' any way, and I has business all de year roun'. Anoder ting. Waitin' busi-ness is kin' o' undignified. You has to depend on moah dan yer wages; you has to be kin' o' hangin' roun' and puttin' out yer hand to git fees, an' it kin' o' goes agin' a fellah's conscience when he has to fotch all the good tings to his boss what pays him, and let the nex' pooah fellah starve, 'cause he haint got no money. So I quit an' went to barberin'."—Saratoga letter.

"I am rich enough," says Pope to Swift, "and can afford to give away a hundred pounds a year. I would not crawl upon the earth without doing a little good. I will enjoy the pleasure of what I give by giving it alive." "When I die," adds the poet, "I should be ashamed to leave enough for a monument if there were a wanting friend above the ground."

"You never saw such a happy lot of peo-ple as we had here yesterday," said a landlady in Indiana to a newly arrived guest; "there were thirteen couples of them.' "What! thirteen couples just married?" "Oh, no, sir; thirteen couples just di-
